Earlier this year, UCSF received an Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) citation for lack of effective safety training. The general intent of this act is to ensure safe and healthful working conditions.

The Office of Environmental Health and Safety has several films and manuals, and advice for each department supervisor on how to run an effective accident prevention program. In order to improve programs for safety inspection and training, Chancellor Sooy is encouraging each department supervisor to contact Marvin Sheppard, Environmental Health and Safety, at x2684, to get specific safety information and to take measures to avoid recurrence of this citation.

An informal faculty development program for junior and new faculty will be held on Tuesday, October 20 at University House from 5 to 7 p.m.

The program is intended to acquaint junior faculty members with the academic personnel review process with respect to advancement and promotion, and to help in the development of their full potential in the areas of teaching, research and service.

The program is sponsored by the Office of Vice Chancellor of Academic Affairs and the Academic Senate Committee on Equal Opportunity. Academic employees wishing to attend should contact Nancy Vega at x1881, or stop by the Academic Affairs Office, S 115.

UCSF's First Annual Campus Family Picnic will be held on Saturday, October 17 in Speedway Meadows, Golden Gate Park, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Everyone on campus is invited to attend and bring families and friends.

Games for all ages will be available including softball and volleyball tournaments, sack races, and prizes will be given for winning teams. There will be a hoedown, the UCSF Marching Band (which made its debut on Chauncey Leake Day in June) will entertain, and folk dancing and an Exploratorium exhibit also will be available.

One of the main events will be the "Chancellor's Cup Race," a five-kilometer (three-mile) event for seasoned runners and for adventurous others. All competitors will receive a free T-shirt, and winners will be awarded UCSF medallions and other prizes.

People are encouraged to bring picnic lunches, but hot dogs, soft drinks and beer will be sold.

If you would like to volunteer to observe the race, work on a food table, or help with the children's games, contact Thena Trygstad at extension 2401.

NEWS BRIEFS

A Japanese company, Green Cross of Osaka, has become the first foreign company to sign a licensing agreement for the recombinant DNA techniques under a patent held by Stanford and UC.

According to Stanford's Office of Technology Licensing, which is administering the patent, Smith-Kline, the Philadelphia-based pharmaceutical company, was the first American firm to sign an agreement.

Green Cross, a diversified pharmaceutical and health care products company, has a subsidiary in the U.S., Alpha Therapeutics of Los Angeles, which sells blood fractions. It has been involved in recombinant research in the past, and has a contract with Genex, a Washington firm, for production of albumin, a blood protein; with the Swiss company, Biogen, for the production of vaccine for hepatitis B; and with Collaborative Research of Massachusetts, for production of interferon.

The recombinant DNA technique was invented by Stanley N. Cohen of Stanford and Herbert W. Boyer of UCSF. Both scientists waived personal royalties for the patent and gave their shares to their universities.

Under the agreement any company wishing to use the process pays $10,000 to sign up and an annual fee of $10,000 for nonexclusive rights. The universities also get a share of the royalties for products that reach the market.

UC-Berkeley clinical dietetic students are receiving part of their training at SFGH, under the auspices of UCSF's Department of Surgery. The 10 students, all seniors in UC-Berkeley's Department of Nutritional Science, provide nutritional assessments for assigned patients and study different diseases each week.

Registered dietician Arlyn Pittle, clinical instructor in Nutrition, Department of Surgery, supervises the students.

Additional students will be included in the program for the winter and spring quarters.

The Laboratory of Radiobiology and Environmental Health has received a five-year grant of $848,000 from the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences for postdoctoral training in environmental mutagenesis and carcinogenesis. Sheldon Wolff, professor of Cytogenetics, Anatomy and Radiology, is program director.

A film starring the UCSF-affiliated "Teens N' Theater," a family life theater company at SFGH, has been judged the best film in the category of classroom and educational films at the 25th S.F. International Film Festival.

The 30-minute film called "TNT" was produced by Terry Looper and directed by Steve Michelson of One Pass Productions, S.F. It will be shown along with prize-winning films from other categories at the Castro Theater on Monday, October 19 at 11 a.m. Admission is free.

The film will soon be distributed nationally as a teaching aid to high school family life classes, drama classes, parent groups and teen clinics.

Teens 'N Theater, whose members are multi-ethnic S.F. high school students, is now holding auditions for its second season in October. Two companies will be cast this year.

For further information on the film or the auditions contact Terry Looper at SFGH, 282-4768.

Nationally prominent researchers and clinicians will examine the question of why some people remain consistently healthy in spite of environmental, behavorial and biological factors which increase susceptibility to disease, at the symposium "The Healing Brain: Who Stays Healthy" on Saturday and Sunday, October 17 and 18 at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, S.F.

Using the theme of the human mind's capability of remarkable sensitivity, resiliency, and recuperative powers, the program will focus on social support and health, living with Type A behavior, stress-resistant personality, effect of daily hassles and uplifts on health, how much exercise, eat, drink and be healthy, and health risk assessment.

The program is sponsored by Continuing Education in Health Sciences and the Institute for the Study of Human Knowledge. For registration information call x3904.

The Affirmative Action Office is asking all UCSF employees who are handicapped, disabled veterans or veterans of the Vietnam War, who have had difficulties in getting employment and/or advancement in employment, to fill out a survey questionnaire to determine if UCSF is complying with this aspect of affirmative action.

If you fall into the category outlined above, and have not received a questionnaire, visit the Affirmative Action Office, Room U 120.

Norman Kretchmer, MD, who recently was appointed UCSF professor of Obstetrics and Pediatrics, has been elected to the prestigious Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences.

Kretchmer, who administers a clinical nutrition research center at SFGH and is professor of Nutritional Sciences at UC-Berkeley, was director of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development since 1974.

Kretchmer joins 14 other UCSF faculty as members of the Institute — most recently Vice Chancellor Shirley S. Chater; deans Jere Goyan, John Greene and Julius Krevans; Julius Comroe; Anne Scitovsky; Price Cobbs; Philip Lee; Lewis Butler; Lucile Petry Leone; Albert Jonsen; Lloyd Smith Jr.; Malcolm Watts; and James P. Hughes.

UCSF has received a $100,000 grant to study school nurse roles in prevention of tooth decay.

The grant, from the Department of Health and Human Services, will be used to study the effect of the school nurse in follow-up services to children who have received dental screenings. Dental decay is the number one health problem of all school children.

Dorothy Oda, assistant professor of Mental Health and Community Nursing, and Jared Fine, lecturer in the School of Dentistry, will work together during this one-year funding which will provide dental screenings for 2,000 fifth and sixth graders from Oakland who will be followed up for two months by school nurses. Nursing professional services will be studied and evaluated to determine their effectiveness in processing the children into appropriate dental care, when indicated.

The study is a collaborative effort between the UCSF schools of Nursing and Dentistry, the Dental Health Bureau of Alameda County Health Care Services Agency and the Oakland Unified School District.

The Ambulatory Care Center has begun using an unusual technique to evaluate discrete breast lumps. The technique, called "fine-needle aspiration," has been used for UCSF hospital in-patients during the past two years, according to pathologists John Abele and Theodore Miller and surgeon William Goodson, who administers the test in the out-patient breast clinic.

First developed more than 40 years ago, fine-needle aspiration has not been used widely in the U.S. but now is undergoing something of a revival. In addition to UCSF, UCLA's Harbor General, Sloan-Kettering Memorial in New York, and a few other U.S. hospitals now routinely employ the technique in suspected cases of breast, thyroid and some other cancers.

The advantage of the procedure for outpatients is that it yields rapid results, allowing patients to be informed of their test's outcome the day they are examined, is no more annoying to a patient than a typical blood test, and is less expensive than traditional surgical biopsy.

To perform fine-needle aspiration, a physician inserts a fine-gauge needle into the breast lump and extracts a sample of cells, which then are examined by pathologists under a laboratory microscope. A mammogram is preferable if no discrete lump is present, the team said.

The relationship between quality of life, psychological well-being and acculturation of Latinos living in S.F.'s Inner Mission District is examined in a recently completed study by an intern in UCSF's clinical and community psychology program at SFGH.

John Lang, PhD candidate in psychology at the Caribbean Center for Advanced Studies in Puerto Rico, conducted the study based on 270 phone interviews and two small group workshops.

The results, although not definitive, are a first attempt at getting an idea of what well-adjusted Latinos in the Mission District are like, according to Ricardo Muñoz, PhD, assistant professor of Psychology, who was Lang's faculty supervisor at SFGH.

The UCSF Department of Psychiatry's clinical/community psychology internship at SFGH is a one-year program for persons completing a doctorate in psychology. Established in 1977, the program emphasizes work with minority and other underserved populations. Studies such as Lang's are undertaken to help learn about the characteristics of minority communities in order to better meet their mental health needs. Muñoz says another intern is completing a larger study of S.F.'s Asian population.

A Teen Mother-Infant Discussion Group will meet on four consecutive Wednesdays beginning October 28, in the Ambulatory Care Building from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

Teen mothers who would like to discuss various subjects including the ups and downs of motherhood; relationships with parents, boyfriends, relatives and friends; body image; infant growth and development and future plans, should contact Marian Mills at x2276 or Gayle Donsky at x1655. The group is sponsored by the Young Parents Clinic.

Thirty-five outstanding volunteers will be honored at a special awards ceremony luncheon on Thursday, October 29 at University House from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. More than 150 guests are expected.

The luncheon will honor the outstanding volunteers for three or more years of service to the Volunteer Office, six volunteers of the month, and volunteers of 10 years Mary Kane and Alice Lloyds.

A new cookbook featuring favorite family recipes of ethnic and regional origin is now available for sale. Compiled by parents and friends of the Child Care/Study Center, the book sells for $10 ($5 of which is tax deductible) and has recipes for soups, salads, vegetable dishes, entrees and a variety of desserts. It also includes 34 specialty recipes from 26 selected San Francisco neighborhood restaurants.

The cookbook will be sold for the first time at the UCSF Family Picnic, Saturday, October 17 at Speedway Meadows, Golden Gate Park from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. It also will be sold in the Child Care Center for the first several weeks of distribution (call x1616 first), and in Millberry Union's Bear's Wares, the gift shop of Moffitt Hospital, and Bear-ly New, the Hospital Auxiliary's thrift shop.

For further information call x1616.
